If the complaint is for a skin problem or ear problem:

1. What are the symptoms? Is there a rash or pustules? Is there itching, scratching, licking feet? Are there reddened ears? Is your animal shaking its head?
2. How long has this been going on? Is there any previous history of ear or skin problems?
3. What is the amount, frequency and type of food you are feeding your animal? Is the food canned or dry? What is the material the water bowl is made of? Does your animal have a water source they can drink from at all times?
4. What type of bedding does your animal sleep on? If this is a cat, what kind of litter do you use?

A typical data base workup will include a physical exam then possibly one or more of the following: ear cytology, skin scrape, fungal culture, blood work, medications, shampoos, diet change recommendations. The doctor will determine the extent of the diagnostics needed based on your animal's history and clinical signs.
